Dungeon Blast

Quite tall and resistant, he is capable of having great physical strength and also of using attacks at a greater distance by firing energy blasts or large rocks that he manifests from his hands.

It is made of clay and its weakness is water and lava.

This work, "Dungeon Blast", is an adaptation of "Red Eyes" by Amanacer-Fiend0, used under CC BY 4.0 and is also an adaptation of "Dungeon Master" by PilzAdam, used under the WTFPL license

"Dungeon Blast" is an open source work and is licensed under CC BY 4.0 by Strange Anomaly

Jelly Herkki

They mainly frequent dark and aquatic places, usually in caves underground. They are human-sized spectral jellyfish that move quickly in water, but are able to move on land using their numerous tentacles to do so.

They float and teleport underground if you hit them.

They attack using their numerous tentacles that can inflict deadly poison on their targets and ensnare their enemies, they have the ability to paralyze people who make direct eye contact with them. However, they must maintain eye contact with their target without blinking for the paralysis to continue. Additionally, this diverts their attention from other targets, making them vulnerable to a surprise attack that can break their concentration and free the paralyzed person from the attack.

They are vulnerable to electricity and can take a lot of damage from it.

This work, "Jelly Herkki", is an adaptation of "Helly-Jellies" and “Peepers” by Amanacer-Fiend0, used under CC BY 4.0, is also an adaptation of "Oerkki" by PilzAdam, used under the WTFPL license.

"Jelly Herkki" is an open source work and is licensed under CC BY 4.0 by Strange Anomaly

Nether Shankex

Nether Shankex are extremely tall, thin, and black in color, known for their erratic movements and the blades on the ends of their arms that they use as weapons. They stab and slash their targets repeatedly with impressive speed. However, due to their thinness, it is quite easy to defeat an individual Nether Shankex despite being quite agile and fast. The blades they possess are made of Damascus steel and in the presence of a being whose power comes from or is related in some way to hell, their blades will grow in size until they can eviscerate most entities related to the underworld. A side effect of their blades is that by causing a non-fatal wound they can transport the injured person into a pocket dimension if they so wish, the pocket dimension is an extradimensional narrative space connected to the 1899 novel "The Nether World" written by George Gissing, people who understand and have experienced the concept of poverty will hear a voice in their head that narrates paragraphs from the novel, upon hearing the voice people will experience deep depression and anxiety that will leave them petrified with fear, anyone who dies within the pocket dimension will manifest back to the place from which they disappeared.

When a Nether Shankex dies, their bodies disappear, leaving only their eyeballs, which are filled with a greenish, mucous substance called "Sender." When a Nether Shankex's eyeball is broken and water is applied to the Sender, a daughter clone will be created that is genetically identical to the deceased Nether Shankex, this clone will inherit copies of its mother's memories, abilities, and personality.

This work, "Nether Shankex", is an adaptation of "Shankers" and "The Grekx" by Amanacer-Fiend0, used under CC BY 4.0, is also an adaptation of "Nether Man" by rael5, used under the MIT License and "Agon" by Der1248, used under the GNU Lesser General Public License 2.1

"Nether Shankex" is an open source work and is licensed under CC BY 4.0 by Strange Anomaly

Wood Mimic

A monster with the appearance of a dead tree that mainly hides among other dead trees around it and waits for someone to cross it before attacking with its long branches and beating them into a bloody pulp, it can pull its roots out of the ground and walk to chase any prey that manages to get out of reach of its branches. Its roots allow it to sense vibrations in the ground, giving it the ability to detect the presence of living beings at a great distance. Although its appearance is worn and withered, it can absorb the life energy of the plants around it and regenerate itself. It can generate a powerful light from within its body to attract unsuspecting victims.

This work, "Wood Mimic", is an adaptation of " Walking Wormwood" by Amanacer-Fiend0, used under CC BY 4.0 and is also an adaptation of "Tree Monster" by PilzAdam, used under the WTFPL license

"Wood Mimic" is an open source work and is licensed under CC BY 4.0 by Strange Anomaly